

Heritage Home School Workshops is honored to announce the addition of a track for students with unique physiological and neuropsychological needs. Many home school families are at a loss when it comes to home schooling a special needs child. Several Heritage families have special needs children and deeply understand the trials involved in this particular homeschool journey. Our philosophical approach is to let God be God as He guides and sustains us through this sometimes difficult process. Since its inception, it has been part of Heritage's vision to minister and embrace these precious families.

Starting in September of 2008, the special education track will take place on Thursdays from 8:00-12:00 for grades preK-12. Our goal is to present material at a slow but in depth pace. It is very important for these students to know the "why" rather than just memorizing facts that have no intrinsic meaning. We will provide classes in core subjects like reading, writing and math that will be taught in state of the art, researched-based, multisensory formats. Along with core subjects, we will have many electives that will be presented at a manageable level. There will also be some therapeutic classes to enhance sensory integration and social-emotional cognition skills. Teachers will customize the workload as specified by the parent's directive for each student. There will also be an on-site resource center for new families that need information on their child's diagnosis and their prospective educational path.
